Memorial Day Observation Here Monday

with him up the hill into the village.

Upon entering the village they met one of its residents, Wilmer McLean, and asked McLean to take them to a house they could use for a meeting. McLean carried them to the first house in sight, but Lee stated that perhaps there was a larger room available. Whereupon McLean, whose full life story has never been adequately written, ushered in his own home, the largest in the village.

Lee dismounted. An orderly removed the bridle from Traveler, and Lee and Col. Marshall entered the house that was to be, and is famous wherever Peace is treasured, the McLean House.

Gen. Grant arrived about 1 P. M. Col. Babcock came out to greet him. Grant went up the steps and was followed into the prepared room by Major General Phillip H. Sheridan, Major General Edward O. C. Ord, Major General Rufus Ingalls, Brigadier General John A. Rawlins, Major General Seth Williams, Major General John G. Bernard, Col. Horace Porter, Col. Ely S. Parker, Col. Frederick T. Dent, Col. Theodore S. Bowers and Col. Adam Badeau.

Grant spoke the first words. He said, "I met you once before, Gen. Lee, while we were serving in Mexico."

Lee replied, "Yes, I know I met you and have often thought of it and tried to recollect how you looked."

Lee broke off this conversation, and said: "I suppose General Grant, that the object of our present meeting is fully understood. I asked to see you to ascertain upon what terms you would receive the surrender of my army."

They discussed this, and then Lee suggested that Grant commit the matter to writing, so that the agreement might be acted upon.

Grant called for his order book, and wrote, making two carbon copies. It was Sunday, April 9, 1865, at Appomatox Court House, in the parlor of the McLean House. Here is what became the terms ending the War Between the States:

[illegible] the substance of my letter to you of the 8th inst., I propose to receive the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia on the following terms, to-wit: Rolls of all the officers and men to be made in fuplicate, one copy to be given to any officer to be designated by me, and the other to be retained by such officer or officer as you may designate. The officers to give their individual paroles not to take up arms against the Government of the United States until properly exchanged; and each company or regimental commander to sign a like parole for the men of their commands. The arms, artillery, and public property to be parked and stacked, and turned over to the officers appointed by me to receive them. This will not embrace the sidearms of the officers,nor their private horses or baggage. This done, each officer and man will be allowed to return to his home, not to be disturbed by the United States authority so long as they observe their paroles and the laws in force where they reside. -U. S. Grant, Lieut. General."

While formal copies for signature were being prepared—incidently using ink supplied by Col. Marshall—Grant agreed to allow all the Confederate men to keep their horses, and to send 25,000 rations. Of this generous offer, Lee said, "This will have the best possible effect upon the men. It will be very gratifying and will do much toward conciliating our people."

It was 4:30 P. M. when the final papers were signed and Lee left the McLean House to return to his men.

It had taken three and one-half hours to end a war.

Grant returned toward Appomattox Station, pausing to send a telegram to E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War, at Washington, telling of the peace. He arranged to leave the next day for Washington.

Lee's final personal words to his men were delivered from a spot now famous as a shrine. On April 10th he addressed his final order to the Army through its commanders.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the next morning, Grant rode out from his headquarters and met Lee for a second time. They discussed hopes that all fighting in the war would now end and harmony be restored.

I have omitted many 'etails. The ordeal of reconstruction and the agony of rehabilitation were yet to come.

The most dignified, the most creditable episode in all American history, however, remains and will remain the magic word of Peace, Appomattox! Because of Appomattox and its Peace, a great nation closed ranks and marched forward into the greatest destiny of all time.

We are told that of the nearly three million men under arms on both sides in the War Between the States, there are yet alive just 63. Twenty-six Yankees and 37 Confederates. I do not know how many of these 63 were at Appomattox that fateful April 9, '65.

But many thousand times 63, yea, all the longing, yearning, hoping people of all the world, could join in a fervent prayer that FOR OUR TIMES there could be another Robert Edward Lee and another Ulysis S. Grant, and anther APPOMATTOX, to stake out for us in simple dignity a new peace for the world, that would not perish with the evening gale nor ever vanish from the face of the earth.
